"Black Sheep" on Sale at Campus Buildings Today

Local Subscribers Also Receive Copies — Contains Eight Pages of Critical Material — Articles Varied in Nature — Price Ten Cents.

THE BLACK SHEEP is on sale today.

McGill's newest publication may now be bought from the caretakers of the University building at ten cents per copy. The magazine was mailed to its five hundred subscribers yesterday, and will reach those who live in and near Montreal during the day.

Technocartic Survey

Of its eight pages of prose and poetry,—mostly of a critical nature — the first thing to strike the readers' eye is a graph entitled "a technocratic survey of the basic industries of Montreal." These basic industries, according to the Black Sheep energy survey, include the Oxford Group, "Femmes Galantes," the M. R. T., and other local institutions.

Feature articles in the independent journal consist of an account of "The McGill Movement" — a spiritual offspring of the Oxford Group — and a testimonial of spiritual regeneration; a plan by which the McGill Daily can be made a newspaper; "poison portraits" of a few campus personalities; an indictment of the snobbery and immaturity of college students, rumored to be written by an outsider; and a diatribe against Montreal newspapers, entitled "The Fourth Estate—Yah!"

Other Articles

Elsewhere in The Black Sheep is a poetical account of "seduction in the stacks;" a complaint against professors who give useless lectures to the white-collared unemployed, and several other brief articles of a non-literary nature.

The subscription list of The Black Sheep now includes nearly five hundred names, it was announced last night. About five hundred copies will be put on sale today in the various campus buildings, excluding Royal Victoria College. When these are sold

Colombia Described At Spanish Meeting

Senor J. Gonsalez Addressed Club Last Night In Union Grill Room

Senor Jorge Gonsalez, ex-Consul for Colombia at Montreal, was the guest speaker last night at the regular meeting of the McGill Spanish Club, held in the Grill Room of the Union. The meeting was largely attended, numbering amongst those present, Professor Sugars, of the Spanish Department; General Carlos Jaramillo, Consul-General for Colombia; Dr. F. B. Battle, Consul for Santo Domingo; Senor Moreno of the Colombian Consulate; and Abbe Henri Jasmin, head of the Department of Spanish at Universite de Montreal.

"Colombia" was the subject of Senor Gonsalez' address. He described in turn the geographical, economical and historical aspects of his country. General Bolivar, the liberator of Colombia, and central figure in its struggle for independence came in for special mention. The speaker also stressed Colombia's great natural resources, especially its rich deposits of natural petroleum, which give promise of great things in the future.

Senor Gonsalez concluded his remarks with an exhibition of slides, setting forth the various architectural, scenic, and economic aspects of the country. Colombia, he pointed out, is a very great producer of coffee, and he illustrated fully the different stages in the growth of this plant with the slides. Fren Denton moved a vote of thanks, following which, light refreshments were served, and the meeting was adjourned.

To Deliver Lecture On Social Welfare

Miss Marjorie Bradford Speaks At Strathcona Hall Tomorrow

"Social Service" is the subject of an address which will be given to the women of the university by Miss Marjorie Bradford at Strathcona Hall tomorrow noon.

Miss Bradford is a graduate of philosophy from the University of Alberta, and has been secretary of the Montreal Council of Social Agencies for the past few years. The speaker is well acquainted with all the social welfares in the city, and her talk should prove very enlightening to many who have not witnessed the fine work which has been done by these organizations. Miss Bradford will explain the extent of the work which is being covered by the Agencies in Montreal, and all women who are interested are invited to attend.

Noted Astronomer Speaks Tomorrow

Abbe Lemaitre To Discuss "The Expanding Universe"

FREE ADMISSION

All Invited To Attend Lecture In Physics Building At 5.00 p.m.

Under the auspices of the McGill Physical Society and the Montreal Branch of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada the world-famed astronomer Abbe Lemaitre will give a lecture tomorrow afternoon at 5.00 p.m. in the MacDonald Physics Theatre. His subject will be "The Expanding Universe" and all those who are especially interested are invited to attend.

Professor Lemaitre was classified by the English scientist, Eddington, as being one the three greatest scientists to attempt to give a complete picture of the Universe, Einstein and de Sitter being the other two. At present Abbe Lemaitre, who is only 32, is the head of the Department of Physics at Louvain University, Belgium. McGill University has been fortunate in the past in having lectures from other great leaders, such as deSitter, Shapley, Brown and Plaskett.

Completes Tour

The distinguished visitor, who is on his way home from Mount Wilson Observatory, California, where he had the distinction of having during one of his lectures Professor Einstein, as a member of his audience, is perhaps the youngest scientist ever to have excited the world-wide interest of his colleague in the scientific world. It is remarked that Professor Lemaitre is one of the few persons who really understand Eins'n's theory of relativity.

With such a distinguished background and reputation, it is hoped that many will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear Abbe Lemaitre, who is accustomed to address large audiences in excellent English.

These debates are being sponsored by The National Federation of Canadian University Students. This is the first year tours have been scheduled and it is the Federation's firm belief that, though this has been neglected in the past, with encouragement, it will become a regular feature of the college year.

Following the debate here, our Maritime visitors will proceed to Universities of Toronto and Western Ontario, where they will debate galust other picked teams. At about the ame time another team composed of Isobel Jordon of Toronto and Marjorie Rean of Western will debate in the Maritimes, —at Dalhousie, Acadia, Mount Allison, and the University of New Brunswick.

Urgent Appeal For Photographs Made For McGill Annual

AN appeal is being made to the student body by the McGill Annual to hand in more snap-shots for the Campus Life Section of this year's issue. Pictures of all types and pertaining to all subjects will be appreciated. In this issue of the Annual, a novel appearance will be rendered by an authentic picture album with black and white pages in which pictures will be artistically arranged.

As there is only one more week before the date set as the last on which pictures will be accepted, students are urged to bring them in as soon as possible. Around McGill there is ample material which could be used as camera studies well worth preservation, and it is hoped that the students will co-operate with the Editorial Board in its efforts to fill this section of the Annual.

Radicals' Relations To Law Discussed

Professor Scott Addresses Labor Club On "Law For Radicals"

SEDITION COMMON

Illegal to Declare Strike Before Submitting To Arbitration

Dealing with the problems that the radical must meet with in the law and legislation of this country with especial regard to his engagement in industrial action, trade unions, and propaganda, Professor F. R. Scott, of the Faculty of Law delivered an address entitled "Law for Radicals" to the meeting of the Labour Club held last night in the Strathcona Hall. The speaker was one of the founders of this organization at McGill University, and takes an active interest in all current labour and political problems.

The radical, whose main interest lies in an effort to improve the social and political structure of the country, must necessarily concern himself to the largest extent with legislation. The speaker then went on to outline the manner in which legislation is at present carried on in Canada, from its inception with the Cabinet to its administration by the courts.

Trade Union Act

Concerning industrial action of the country, Prof. Scott briefly outlined the position of the trade unions in Canada with their rights and restrictions, mostly brought about as a result of the passing of the Dominion Trade Union Act. Another Act of Parliament provides for the submitting of all disputes between the Trade

Playwrights' Works And Theatre Growth In Germany Traced

Professor Graff Continues Goethe Society Series Of Lectures

EXPLAINS THEORIES

Various Schools Of Thought On Dramatic Art Outlined

The growth of the German theatre from its early and impure stage until its development was finally culminated by Schiller and Goethe, who conceived of the stage as "A school of noble thought and poetic beauty" was outlined last night in an address at Moyse Hall "Weimar and the German Theatr" by Professor Graff of the German department. The lecture was one of a series sponsored by the Goethe Society.

While the Germans had early evidences a sense of the dramatic, native talent was practically non-existent till 1600. "Acting was not a profession, but a mere pastime" and the few stage entertainers were mainly foreigners such as English comedians or French and Dutch troupers. While these groups contributed mimicry and prose to the theatre, they nevertheless fostered a sense of vulgarity and cheap sensationalism.

German Companies

The first purely German Company was one which sprung up in Nuremberg in 1688. It popularized the French Moliere and all that he implied in the way of vivid character representation. But, as was pointed out by the speaker, "the greatest scourge of the theatre of that time was improvisation" which led to a lack of organization and harmony. The upper class were then only interested in the Italian opera.

"The German theatre was really

Second Of Tuesday Luncheons Attended

Rev. Noel Palmer Addressed Combined S.C.M.-E.C.U. Meeting

Yesterday noon Rev. Noel Palmer was the guest speaker at the second of the weekly series of luncheon lectures held on Tuesdays in the Grill Room of the Union. His subject was "My Religion," which is the theme running through the whole series. The meeting was under the joint auspices of the S. C. M. and E. C. U., both of the University.

At the outset the speaker gave his opinion that religion is not just a creed which you believe but it is what you really live by. His presentation of his personal religion began with a brief description of his early life and how he found a religion which really worked out in practice. This he found only after a long period of concentrated thinking and after service at the front.

Speaking from the height of six feet eight inches he pointed out that we must have a definite relation with Christ in order to be of use to those who need us. He summed up his whole religion in the one word — Christ, which is a living reality to him.

Philosophical So. Will Meet Thursday

The meeting, at which the entire executive and advisory board will be present, will be one of great importance. Apart from the interesting subject under discussion, the election of officers will take place.

House Of Commons Club Reads Debate

Quote Radio Discussion Between Lady Rhonda And G. K. Chesterton

IDLENESS A MENACE

Amusing Speeches of G. B. Shaw On Leisured Women Cited

"The Menace of the Leisured Woman" was discussed last night at a meeting of the House of Commons Club, held at 8.30 in the R.V.C. Several members read a debate which took place some years ago over the radio, when George Bernard Shaw introduced the speakers, Lady Rhonda and G. K. Chesterton.

Last night, Ruth Dow took the part of G. B. Shaw, and read his opening speech. It restated the question whether a woman is capable of successfully bringing up children and holding a position at the same time. He regarded leisured women as people who spend all their time in "drinking cocktails and dancing the Charleston."

Lady Rhonda's Speech

Dorothy Ross, a graduate of the university, read the speech given by Lady Rhonda, who felt strongly against the leisured woman. She stated that idleness was the root of all evil, that it was easy to be both leisured and occupied, that high heels were invented for the woman of leisure, and other women merely followed their lead in spite of the disadvantages.

She disputed a previous statement of Chesterton that women should devote themselves to bringing up children by saying that if hammers did nothing save to produce little hammers and did not attend to their work of hammering, there would be none of the necessary hammering done. She stated her belief that busi-

The Value of an Education

WE often hear the questions asked, "What's the use of an education anyway? Can you get a better job as a result of it? Isn't it true that college graduates are a drug on the market, and that it is often a handicap rather than an advantage to be one when seeking a position?"

This point of view which is purely commercial is to be regretted as it ignores all the benefits of a college education which cannot be reckoned in terms of money. However, even taking this viewpoint, it is easily proved that the value of an education is considerable.

Dean E. W. Lord of the College of Business Administration, Boston University gives the following figures:

"The average elementary school trained boy goes to work at about 14 years of age. At thirty he reaches his maximum income of about $1,200 a year. Between the ages of fourteen and sixty he earns about $45,000. No more than $2,000 is earned during the four years that would have given him a high school education.

"The High-School graduate goes to work at eighteen, passes the average untrained man within seven years, rises steadily to his own maximum of $2,200 at forty, and continues at that level for the remainder of his active life. His total earnings from eighteen to sixty are about $78,000. The $33,000 difference between his lifetime earnings and those of the untrained man, represent the cash value of a high-school course.

"The college graduate begins work at twenty-two, and at twenty-eight is earning as much as the high-school graduate at forty. His total earnings from twenty-two to sixty amount to $150,000 or $72,000 more than those of the high-school graduate, a measure of the cash value of a college course.

"The conclusions which may be drawn from these facts that every hour spent in high-school is worth at least $5.00 in after life, and every hour spent in college earns at least $10.00."

This should prove conclusively to all doubters that an education has a very real commercial value. We think, however, that this is the least of the benefits to be obtained from one.

The cultural benefits of a college education must not be lightly glossed over. It it does nothing else it teaches a man how to read and how to appreciate some of the finer things of life. We speak of an educated man as being well-read, and this is literally true. No one can spend four years in any reputable university without having read fairly widely on various subjects. Usually, when he is through college he continues reading books of real cultural benefit, for after four years he has got the habit of reading, and his mind is trained to appreciate somewhat better books than the man with only an ordinary education.

But this is not all. At college a man usually participates to a greater or lesser extent in a wide variety of activities. He sees some good shows, hears some good music, and attains a broader outlook on life. He makes friendships based on a community of interest, which are real and lasting. He attends some dances and some parties and learns how to handle himself in various situations. He probably does some debating and acquires enough self-confidence to be able to make a public speech without making a fool of himself. In short he is in every way a better all round man. Yes, we repeat, the monetary gains are the least of the benefits of a college education.

Graduates' Number

TOMORROW'S issue of the Daily is being prepared in conjunction with the Montreal Branch of the Graduates' Society as a special feature of the annual Smoker to be held tomorrow night in the Union. The front page will contain news as usual and reporters are asked to consult the assignment book in the office between 12 and 1. However all societies and campus organizations which wish to have notices published, must leave them in the Daily Office before eight o'clock as no notices will be accepted after that time.

NOTES AND NOTES

Popular Song

WHEN Milord swirls Milady round the floor to the rhythmic strains of a popular dance tune, I'll bet he does not worry much about the popularity of that particular "metronome." Statistics about popularity,—or about love or the Hindu problem for that matter,—are left to that modern development in space filling known as the columnist (colyumist), who must write about something, and who must do it regularly. Without mentioning Panphilus, for the moment, let us turn to the discoveries of one, Martin J. Porter, of the New York Evening Journal. His official designation is "Aircaster," which must be a position comparable to that of the automobile or live-stock editors of the Daily, who are remembered occasionally in the mails.

Brother Porter conducted a poll to determine the ten most popular songs of the past decade, granting suffrage to slightly less than four hundred members of the musicians' and radio artists' guilds. With 160 titles on the ballot, "Ol' Man River" won the race for honors with 187 votes, to be followed by "Man I Love" with 141, and "My Blue Heaven" with 134 votes. Here is the list, with composer and date of publication attached; the order is according to preference:

Ol' Man River	Jerome Kern	1927
Man I Love	George Gershwin	1928
My Blue Heaven	Walter Donaldson	1927
Goodnight Sweetheart	Noble Ray	1931
When Day Is Done	Katscher	1924
Stardust	Hoagy Carmichael	1929
I'll See You In My Dreams	Isham Jones	1924
Tea for Two	Vincent Youmans	1924
Lover, Come Back To Me	Sigmund Romberg	1928
Russian Lullaby	Irving Berlin	1927

Runners up included "What is this Thing Called Love?," Chloe," "My Heart Stood Still," "Who?," "All Alone," "Crazy Rhythm," and "Me and My Shadow." Among the interesting facts to be noted are that four of the first ten numbers came from musical productions, that no one composer has two numbers in the leading ten, though Irving Berlin came closer to this achievement than any of his rivals, and that five songs belong to the 1927-28 period of prosperity.

THE popular song is no modern creation. There has always been contemporary forms of light ballad, very few of which have been handed down in their original forms to posterity, but which have influenced the real music of the era in a marked manner. The academic composer has rarely been very happy in the realm of popular music, in spite of the attractions of the latter both for the monetary rewards, and for the comparative ease with which this means conquers the public.

The latest hit, no matter what it is, appears to be remarkably simple, either in musical construction or in its melodic arrangement. Proof that this is not so, is found in the failure of so many good composers to achieve success in this respect.

The musical language of a composer of even average ability is an aristocratic one, inherited from an ancestry of master-artists. Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, and the rest. The popular song, on the other hand, must be almost domestic in its language with the result that the academic composer's attempts are usually labored and unhappy, or, as has been described more graphically, like "Mona Lisa chewing gum."

A popular song writer must specialize in his work if he is to be successful. He must be attuned constantly to the everchanging aspects of the general trend of thought, or politics, of fashion, and of all the varying facets of social life. These influences must color and mould his work, directly and indirectly, and must in fact be made a necessary part of the business of song writing, with little relation to musical art. The skillful composer will inevitably misuse the popular idioms, and will merely make their mundane character stand out all the more vividly against the greater nobility of the background.

Rewards for the creation of a hit are large, but unfortunately, the frequency of success is very small, and long lean months and years intervene, when the pickings are meagre. The golden aura of the beneficial publicity and financial returns that accompany a hit will however continue to induce a ready supply of popular music, and here is one of the reasons why this form of music is inevitable.

Georges Enesco

GEORGES ENESCO, Roumanian composer, conductor and violinist, who appeared as guest artist with the Montreal Orchestra three weeks ago, will return to the city to give a violin recital at the Salle Doree of the Mount Royal Hotel on February 9th, under the auspices of the Faculty of Music.

A week after his appearance in Montreal, Enesco appeared at the Metropolitan House, where he played the Beethoven Concerto with the orchestra under the direction of Sandor Harmati. This piece was so warmly applauded that as an encore he was forced to play two additional compositions, both by Bach. Then, taking the baton, Enesco directed the orchestra in a performance of his first Roumanian Rhapsody in A major, displaying thus, his three talents at the one concert.

In his Montreal recital, Enesco will include compositions by Veracini, Mozart, Chausson, Pugnani, Scarlatescu, Szymanowski and Ravel.

MISS ETHEL STARK was not unconcious of the stage and the audience, as either the editors or the printer made my review read, but was obviously aware of the presence of both. It is to her credit, however, that she was able to master any feelings of nervousness while playing, to give her already acclaimed performance.

THE 50th anniversary of Richard Wagner's death will fall on February 13 and will be commemorated by a special matinee performance on that day of "Parsifal" by the Metropolitan Opera Company.

In further remembrance, the Philadelphia Orchestra will play excerpts from "Parsifal" on Saturday evening, April 1st. This program will be broadcast. "Parsifal" has been ranked highly not only among Wagner's works, but also as one of the supreme masterpieces of musical art.

NINO MARTINI, Columbia's young Italian tenor star whose remarkable voice range has astounded critics, will add a new page to American musical history at 11.00 p.m., EST, Wednesday, February 1, when he sings the highest tenor aria ever composed — the beautiful "Credea si Misera . . . Ella e Tremante" from Bellini's opera, " I Puritani," accompanied by Howard Barlow and the Columbia Symphony Orchestra. This will be the aria's premiere on the air and its first American performance in its original key.

Martini is probably the only tenor alive capable of performing the aria as it was written. His voice covers the span between baritone and coloratura soprano, extending up to F above high C, a peak difficult for even the best of sopranos to attain. The only other tenor in the annals of music whose voice range was equal to Martini's was Giovanni Rubini, for whom "I Puritani" was composed. The opera was in comparative disuse for over 70 years until 1928, when Martini revived it in Milan in its original key.

AMONG the many rumours floating about the grounds of the university, is one to the effect that the Red and White Revue musical comedy "Princess Angella" will be known as "It's a Herring!"

More About "Cabbages"

To the Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:—

From time to time there appears in the Daily a column known as Cabbages and Kings and ofttimes do we find therein humorous remarks.

Some time ago it was announced in the Daily that, an experimental tea was to be held by the Theologs, then it went on to state the nature of the tea and the reasons for its being held. This was too much for our worthy critic and it provided an excellent opportunity for him to "get a rise" out of the sermon makers.

The writer of this column may be compared to one of two small boys, both being engaged at constructing a fantastic castle out of blocks. After reaching a certain point near completion it is the delight of our hero to pull one or two blocks from the base thus causing the structure to topple to the floor.

And so we have a certain type of people who live merely to tear down and I cannot help but get such an impression of our critic as he stated what he thought of the value of the picture shown recently at His Majesty's Theatre.

By the Powers that be, surely we haven't reached the point where people do not have to hear "the time worn admonition of go-straight." Much is required even in this advanced twentieth century to keep men and women straight. It requires something to keep us on the right road and enable us to "keep right on to the end."

The writer points out that censors are very strict with regard to Hollywood productions but with what result? We have the subtle picture, pictures which are suggestive and which stir our passion to the extent, in many cases, that one not only thinks but acts with disastrous results.

There are some men and women who have come to this University for a time and they feel that they have learned everything and that "The End of the Road" held nothing for them. It is to be hoped that such people are active workers in our social organizations of the city and are doing their part to teach others. But alas! These same people who know all about it do nothing but sit back and, as the little boy, directs their efforts to tearing down whatever else the other fellow does to construct.

The End of the Road was anything but crude, however if one went to find something to laugh at, well, I suppose he could find it but be that as it may, it was not shown for that purpose.

Backward boys and girls there are of fourteen and fifteen but think of all the ignorant men and women between the ages of twenty and thirty just because they have not the ambition to read. The next best thing is to provide an illustrated lecture and when a picture can be produced which illustrates, with accuracy, then something has been accomplished for the improvement of society.

The truth shown was a little too plain for Cabbages and Kings, he would rather use his imagination to a greater extent, he would rather sit back and allow ignorance to prevail, he would rather suffer than have good health all because . . . oh but what is the use?

And so the world goes on!

Thanking you, sir, for your space, I am

Yours truly
—K.G.M.

The Editor, the Daily,

Dear Sir:—

Reading in the Daily, that the Black Sheep is to make its appearance tomorrow, I hasten to express my opinion, and I am sure the opinions of others like myself, who think as I do, that this publication will be an indecent periodical, unfit for appearance on the campus of such a university like McGill.

From the advance notices that have appeared in your esteemed paper, the Daily, I have drawn the inference that this magazine, "the Black Sheep," is being published by a group of soreheads, who are discontented with the prevailing state of affairs. Present day economic conditions have been acclaimed bad enough, and there is no reason why a group of, may I say soreheads, to go ahead and publish their silly, nonsensical, common opinions that are sure to be in bad taste, and unfit for publication at McGill. I presume that the Black Sheep will contain articles which will unjustly critize campus organizations—I think the organizations criticized should not worry about what this group of immature soreheads think.

I hope I have made myself clear about this matter, and thanking you for your esteemed space, I am —Justitian.

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:—

This year's crop of freshmen seems to include an unusually large number of those who have no respect either for library traditions or for the honest efforts of upper-classmen to do a little work.

Several times recently I have seen a group of two or three so-called students, obviously freshmen, interrupting the studies of a whole table at the library with a loud discussion of a movie, a hockey game, or the girls across the way. Even the task of writing a physics lab report it seems cannot be done without a babble of talk and banter.

This morning a conscientious upper-classman, after having suppressed his annoyance for a feull twenty minutes while two very important freshmen interrupted the work of at least half a dozen students, politely reminded them that others were trying to study. His sincere request was received with rudeness and ignored.

A little thought will, I think convince such offenders that there are some who wish to study and who have the right to expect that they can do so in the library without continual interruption.

McGill Seeks Revenge For Last Defeat

Hope To Down Vics In Second Game Of Double-Header

ROYALS AND CANUCKS MEET IN FIRST TILT

TWO important matches feature the Senior Group twin bill tonight. Bobby Bell's Red team engages in its second game in three days when they meet Frank Carlin's Victorias who last week administered the worst beating that the McGill team has suffered this season, in the second game which will probably decide Vics' chances of making the play-offs this year. The first game brings together Royals and Canadiens in what should be a scrappy match as both teams are badly in need of points, though for different reasons. Canadiens are hoping to displace McGill from the top rung while Royals are being hard-pressed for the third place position by the surprising Vics.

McGill will have completed an exceedingly strenuous week when Saturday rolls around. Starting off with Monday night's Varsity tilt the Redmen played the first game of three scheduled for them this week. The extra game is against Columbus and has been moved back to the 3rd in order to facilitate the play-offs which at present look as if they may take some time to be decided. Friday's game will be first while Vics and Canadiens will hook up in the final encounter.

Red Team Much Improved

With the Red ice squad showing greatly improved form against Varsity, Coach Bell is hoping to avenge the setback received at the hands of Victorias last week. Vics have proved themselves difficult to hold down in both games so far. The first game was won by the Redmen by a one-goal margin, scored late in the final session while the result of last week's match is still a topic for discussion among hockey enthusiasts. Frank Carlin is in a desperate situation and will drive his crew to the limit in order to land them in one of the coveted niches.

Frank Shaughnessy will be back in action and will support his teammate, Gordie Meiklejohn, once more. Shaughnessy would have revelled in the heavy going against the Blue team and should be raring to go tonight. Meiklejohn's work against Varsity was one of the features of the Red team's play. The Wisconsin bullet worked his head off and saved his team many times with his heady work. Johnny Riddell is not likely to be ready to get back into action and Ross Wilson is likely to get the call, although Bobby Bell may be forced to use Nels Crutchfield to relieve the rear division in the event that Wilson cannot take part.

Goaler Not Decided On

It is not likely that tonight's goalie will be named until just prior to game time as the McGill mentor is confronted with a problem in selecting his custodian for the night. Maurice Powers played a fine game Monday night and looks to be the one who will guard the cage at present, but Hollie McHugh may be given a chance to show the Maroon-shirts that he was below form when they beat him seven times last week. McHugh has turned in some sensational work in the Red citadel and will no doubt vindicate himself should he draw the assignment. Whoever gets it will have a busy night.

Jack McGill received another bump on his injured leg but will be in action along with Gordie Crutchfield and Hugh Farquharson. This first line looked good Monday night, and the trio is expected to create plenty of excitement. Ken Farmer's three points earned in the Toronto match did not help him to leave Jack McGill behind in the local loop scoring and he will have to repeat his performance if he is to step away from his rival.

Nels Crutchfield Going Well

Nels Crutchfield was hitting his old stride in the Varsity game, rushing and checking with some of his old- time smoothness. Only good work by Frank Shipp prevented him from tallying and his constant rushes were a threat throughout. Tommy Robertson also played consistently against the Blue team, holding down his wing in capable fashion and getting a goal into the bargain.

Canadiens are given the call over Don Penniston's boys on performances to date, but with Vics forcing them, the red-and-blue clad puckmen may open up with a better brand of hockey. They have a classy roster but so far they have done very little to attract attention. Doc Clements' Canucks, having been idle last week, will be well rested for their attempt to move into the lead.

Play will start at 8 o'clock and the McGill game will commence about 9.30 p.m.

The latest census places the population of the United States at 122,698,190. Of this number the total formal membership of the Christian churches is 54,624,976, of which sime 21,000,000 are listed as Roman Catholics. Jews number 4,000,000. Therefore there are over 63,000,000 in the country who have no affiliation with any Christian church.

Defensive Star

GORDIE MEIKLEJOHN, the Wisconsin Wonder, played a brilliant and heady game against Varsity and will be on the job to hold Vics in check.

Red Swimmers Will Compete In Quebec

Sprenger, Stein, Shaw And Savage Will Take Part

FOUR MAN TEAMS

A FOUR man team composed of Stein, Shaw, Savage and Sprenger will leave Saturday morning to take part in a special meet being staged by the Quebec Winter Club on Saturday evening. Teams of four men each are being entered by the Quebec Winter Club, the Quebec Swimming and Athletic Club.

Coach George Vickerson will accompany the McGill representatives and will direct them in the events which are to be run off. Five events comprise the card, four individual races and one relay being billed. Free style events at fifty and one hundred yards and a fifty yard breast stroke and fifty yard back stroke will be the contests preceding the relay.

McGill is sending a strong team but stiff competition is expected from the other entrants who are known to have some fine natators in their ranks. Stein, Shaw, Savage and Sprenger have done well in local competition in the events listed and can be counted on to uphold the Red and White to the very best of their ability.

WITH THE McGILL SKIERS IN SWITZERLAND

By STIRLING MAXWELL
President Red Birds Ski Club in Charge of Party

CAMPBELL made two flawless descents of 39 4-5" and 39 2-5" at top speed, his runs in each part being faster than any other competitors. Green of Cambridge was second with 41 2-5" and 41" flat courses and was followed by Chris. Taylor, the Cambridge captain, Jack Houghton, McGill, Dunn and Bushell of Cambridge, Dorkin and Renold of McGill, Hamilton Smith, Oxford and finally Ball of McGill, who was feeling indisposed and ran far below his usual form. Only one penalty was incurred in the entire course, the standards of skiing being high. In spite of the fairly even spacing of the members of each team the Englishmen won the race on total time. Oxford and Cambridge compiled 100 points to McGill's 94. A year ago in Canada we had been beaten by a matter of twelve points in this event and it is interesting to note that this lead had now been cut in half.

The following day, January 5th, the International University Meet, known as the S.A.S. got under way. Competitors were divided into three classes as follows:—

Class I —University undergraduates under the age of 26.
Class II —University graduates and students over 26 but under 32.
Class III—University graduates over the age of 32.

The downhill race, commencing on top of an Alp some 10,000 feet above sea-level and descending about 2,000 feet into a valley was the first event on the programme.

As we carried no spares the undergraduate team was kept out of this race in order to preserve it intact for the Langlauf. Pangman and Jost, however, entered in class II. Pangman distinguished himself by coming fourth and Jost ninth in a field of 19 in their class. Actually placing 13th and 22nd respectively in a total field of 105 which was quite remarkable considering the importance of the event and our limited experience in downhill racing.

On Friday morning, January 6th, the S.A.S. Langlauf was run off over an 18 km. course. The Oxford-Cambridge vs. McGill race was combined with it as it was not considered advisable to hold another cross country race within the very limited time at our disposal.

The wisdom of our decision to keep the undergraduates out of the downhill was demonstrated when Pugh of Cambridge injured his wrist and Walter of Oxford sprained an ankle on the high slopes. Neither was able to compete in the Langlauf and as the English had no further reserves we agreed to race only a four man team. Pangman easily won Class II. by a margin of five minutes over his nearest rival in 1.16.44 and was fourth out of the total field of 53. Campbell placed 8th in Class I. in a field of 44, Ball was 11th, Dorken 18th, Houghton 21st and Renold 37th.

This time McGill earned 100 points while the combined Oxford-Cambridge teams finished with 94.32 points.

Campbell recorded his third straight win in as many races, thus proving himself by far the most useful man on either the Oxford-Cambridge or McGill teams. Dunn of Cambridge was the best Englishman and attributed his success to the fact that he held Pangman's pace for a few minutes when he passed during the race.

The final results of the Oxford-Cambridge vs. McGill meet were: Oxford-Cambridge—98.16 and McGill—98.00.

So close was the contest that it was generally believed for a while that McGill had won the meet. The illusion was cruelly dispelled, however, when the auditors went into session and the Englishmen were declared winners by a fraction of one per cent.

The series was productive of excellent sportmanship and good feeling on both sides. McGill showed a decided improvement in the Slalom and a lot of credit is due to the Englishmen for their performance in the Langlauf. If we were unable to win we brought the score to a point where it might truly be said to be uncomfortably close from an Englishman's point of view.

The first thirty men in the S.A.S. downhill qualified for the slalom. Jost and Pangman came 6th and 7th respectively in Class II and 13th and 14th in the whole field.

The following day, January 7th, the relay race, the big event of the S.A.S. meet was held. In the Downhill, Slalom, Cross Country and Jump the men competed as individuals but here five men combined to form a team, all of whom must be undergraduates or graduates of the same University. We entered a Red Birds Team running for McGill, composed of three undergraduates and two graduates. Nine teams competed, two Italian from Mailand and Turin, an Austrian from Innsbruck, two Swiss from Bern and Zurich, a Cambridge team, a Norwegian, Jugoslavian and Canadian, all competing for the University Championship of Europe. The start was 8,000 feet above sea-level, high on the open slopes above the town. Huge mountains towered up behind to lose their peaks in the clouds. Across the valley and in all directions were more mountains, treeless and glistening in the sun. Far down below again appeared the roofs of the seemingly toy village of St. Moritz by the side of the lake.

ness is the most important thing to a country, and if trades are good enough for men, why should they not be good enough for women?

Peace of Home Life

G. K. Chesterton's speech was read by Margaret Grant, the president of the club. The text of his speech was that there was much to be said for the person with nothing to do. Too many of the present generation are too busy to think. There is nothing for the leisured woman to do; she is too prone to go in for social service and oppress the poor, or else she is employed by some redoubtable company to sell bogus stocks. Therefore she should remain at home, the only place where there is liberty, individuality and creative power. He stated that "the male sex is capable of magnificent dullness."

G. B. Shaw's summary of the debate was then read. He seemed pleased that the speakers had kept to the theory "never argue, repeat your assertions," and then proceded to refute their statements himself.

An open discussion of the subject followed, and refreshments were served. It was announced that at the next meeting, Alma Howard would read a paper on a scientific subject.

Arts '34 Mock Parliament To Be Held On Thursday

On Thursday afternoon, the Parliament of Arts '34 will hold its second session in Room 64 of the Arts Bldg. at 4 o'clock. The subject is "Resolved that a Tax be Levied on all Unmarried Men over 25 Years of Age." Among those who have signified their intention of speaking are Dave Goodman, Jack Nolan, Art Styles, Mark Goldenberg, Mac. Rawson. The Rev. Mr. George will act as Speaker. All those who wish to speak are asked to get in touch with Mark Goldenberg.

At this meeting debaters will be elected who are to represent the class in the forthcoming Arts Interclass Debates; so all interested are urged to attend.

Monday's Hero

KEN FARMER will be goal hunting tonight with his usual persistence in an effort to pass his teammate Jack McGill with whom he is tied for Senior Group scoring honors.

Fighters Participate In Important Bouts Tonight At Smoker

Society of Cost Accountants And Industrial Engineers Sponsors Event

CORBETT VS. BLACK

BERT LIGHT'S boxers, fully recovered from the effects of their gruelling session over the week-end when they met the city champions at the Central Y on Friday night and then tackled each other the following night at the M.A.A.A. in several no-decision fights, once more return to active competition. Tonight they fight at the Union at a smoker sponsored by the Society of Cost Accountants and Industrial Engineers; tomorrow will see the graduates urging them on to great heights at the Graduates' Smoker, and on Saturday they engage in the first major meet of the year, the Interfaculty B. W. and F.

The bouts tonight are freighted with interest for the participants, for defeat means practical elimination from the regular squad that meets Varsity and Queen's on February 17 and 18. The headliner on the card is the Corbett-Black match in the welterweight division. Both fighters went down to defeat in their last appearances, Black suffering a technical knockout at the hands of Romeo Montpetit of M.A.A.A., and as a result both are extremely anxious for a win.

McLennan Meets MacGregor

Red McLennan should defeat Les MacGregor on his showing in recent fights but as both are extremely hard-hitters, a chance blow may decide the outcome. Two featherweights, Wolfrey and Smith, will fight it out for the right to meet H. Black in the finals of that weight in the Interfaculty.

Hugh MacGregor is leading in the race for Bert Light's trophy, which is to be presented to the boxer who makes the most consistent showing during the entire season. The ultimate winner of the silver cup will not be known till Saturday when final results will be tabulated.

The program:
126 lbs.—Wolfrey vs. Smith.
145 lbs.—Gildea vs. Swift.
155 lbs.—Corbett vs. Black.
165 lbs.—McLennan vs. MacGregor.
Exhibition: Gilbert vs. Light.
Relay Fight: MacGregor, Corbett and Swift.

Three Bouts for Graduates

Two decision bouts and one relay bout will be run off at the Graduates Smoker on Thursday night in the Union Ballroom:

118 lbs.—S. Bercowitz vs. H. Black.
145 lbs.—V. Corbett vs. H. MacGregor.
Relay: MacLennan, Corbett, MacGregor.

rescued from obscurity by a woman and a pedant" for reform was introduced by the actress Neuberin and the playwright Gottched who effected a reversion to classicism and in time to rigid stiffness. Against this Leipsic dramatic school, as it was known, there soon came a reaction, led by Lessing and Eckoff—"the Garrick of Germany." Naturalness and feeling was the keynote of the new school.

Poetic School

Naturalness, too, can be abused as Dr. Graff showed and in the hands of minor talent on the stage it was. No wonder then that Goethe and Schiller became the great exponents of the idea of poetic in drama. When the court of Weimar offered its patronage to Goethe he was able to put his principles into effect in the form of directing an amateur but rigidly organized group.

The amateurs had in their midst dukes and poets. Notwithstanding this, Goethe regulated and rehearsed them with despotic control. He placed great emphasis on experimentation of all sorts; because of his other interests," the peculiarity of literature and poetry was emphasized at the expense of the dramatic.

It was not, however, till Schiller came on the scene to aid Goethe, that Weimar reached the height of its glory. By this time there was a regular professional company whose presentations were characterized by a literary choice of plays, a harmony among the cast, a rhetorical diction, a plastic arrangement of form, but always a reverential respect on the part of the actors for their duties, a respect engendered by the inspiration of Goethe.

The contribution of foreign drama and the theatrical schools at Leipsig, Hamburg, Mannheim and Weimar laid the cornerstones, concluded Dr. Graff of the German theatre. All that has been later superimposed is merely an improvement in technical skill, and the continuation of the traditions of the leading dramatists Neuberin, Schroeder, Iffland, Schiller and Goethe.

Radicals Relations To Law Discussed

Union and Employer to an arbitrary board, and in the case of further disagreement a strike will be considered as legal. This has been adopted by every province in the Dominion with the exception of P.E.I.

Although, the speaker contended peaceful picketing is legally permitted in this country, many acts have been passed which more or less indirectly prohibit this. As the Law now stands, the trade unions have been reprived of this means of striking, and there is, according to the speaker, much to be done in this section of legislation.

Sedition Common Charge

With regard to freedom of speech, associations, and the formation of clubs, Prof. Scott expressed the fact that these are legally permissible with the condition that they do not encroach upon the tranquility of the state, nor advocate any violence towards the present governmental system. The crime of sedition is not uncommonly charged in this country, although it is very difficult to define exactly the word "sedition."

Discussing the severities of Section 98 of the Criminal Code, the speaker pointed out that the House of Commons had passed a bill to repeal this section five times, but that it has been thrown out each time by the Senate. Further evidence of injustices in parts of the legal code is evinced in the Immigration Acts. Concluding with a series of actual cases relating to the strictness of this latter Act, Professor Scott finally remarked "If you are a radical, try and be a Canadian."

to the Government as Minister of Interior Undertakings.

At the close of the Parliament Dr. Kiang Kang-Hu will make a few remarks on the Sino-Japanese Situation and on the discussion in general.

The Prime Minister has collected a powerful Cabinet to support the motion put forward by the Administration. The post of Minister of Occidental Affairs will be filled by the Hon. K. M. C. MacIntyre, member for Montreal-St. Edwards, while the M.P. for Westmount, the Hon. Clarence Gross, will be Minister of Oriental Rugs. The Minister of Finance is the Hon. Samuel Irving Brenhouse who was recently returned by acclamation in the constitutency of St. Amadie.

The Hon. R. Malcolm Ransom, the only "red" Cabinet Minister, who eked out a close victory in last week's by-elections in Point-aux-Trembles de Ha Ha, is the recently appointed Minister of Banals and Stowaways. Other Cabinet Ministers are the Hons. L. Kunelius, J. Burt, and A. Pick, who will fill the portfolios of Labor, Fisheries and Radio, respectively.

Other members of the Opposition ranks who have not been already mentioned are H. Tees and A. Walsh. As usual the Mock Parliament will be open to the public and all who are interested are invited to attend and support their views.

Debating Executive Meets

At a luncheon meeting held yesterday in the Union, the executive of the Debating Union met with the debating representatives of the various classes in Arts, to arrange for a closer cooperation between the class debates and the Debating Union. It was decided to hold an Interclass competition among the classes in Arts. Edmund Collard asked the class representatives to urge members to attend the Practice Nights, and to see that their classes were represented in the Mock Parliaments of the Debating Union.

College Students

Seattle, Wash. — How much do college men spend for shirts, suspenders, cuff links, razor blades, and liniment, yearly? How much do coeds spend for formals, shoes, cigarettes, mascara, and tooth paste? How many tennis balls and radio tubes do University students purchase every year, and what brands of gas and oil do they use?

These are among the questions which will be answered by an advertising survey to be conducted by the University Ad club, Alpha Delta Sigma, advertising professional, and Prof. Henry Burd's marketing class. The same survey will be conducted in all Pacific Coast colleges. The results will be used by A. J. Norris Hill, national representative of Major College Publications, to sell advertising for them.

For Picked Students

A specially-prepared six-page questionnaire will be given to 350 picked students according to Bill Hannah, Daily business manager. Every tenth name in the student directory was taken, and from this group a list was composed. Five per cent of the men and of the women in each class.

Men will be interviewed during the rest of this quarter, beginning today. Women will be questioned for the first two weeks next quarter. Students will be requested to come to the Ad club individually to answer the questionnaires.

Covers Many Articles

The questionnaire will include clothing, toiletries, food, and reading habits. An appendix for local use will deal with miscellaneous local expenditures, insurance, and corduroy trousers.

Students will be asked what brand of the article in question they last purchased, how many they own now, the cost of the last unit purchased, and the total purchase in a year.

Junior Republic Corrects Evils

Ithaca, N. Y. — "The George Junior Republic at Freeville, N. Y., is a village like any other village, except that its citizens are young men and women who face at the age of 16 civic and social responsibilities which young people in other communities do not have to meet until they have reached the arbitrary standard of 21 years," said William R. George, founder of the George Junior Republic, here recently.

"In other institutions," asserts Mr. George, "people of this age are thought of as students, wards or inmates, and have no civic or economic responsibilities because they are presided over by adults. In the covered wagon period, one was a man if he did a man's work, regardless of his age, but in modern times one is regarded as a child until he is 21, unless war comes along, when he is permitted to take his man's part. The fact is that there are only three things essential to being an adult: to be able to make one's livelihood, to have reached the peak of basic intelligence (not to be confused with accumulation of knowledge), and to be able to become a father or mother.

Are Not Infants

"People who come up to these standards are not infants," Mr. George went on to say, "and these standards are all possible of achievement by the age of 16. The tragedy is that these 16-year-olds, knowing within themselves that they are capable of civic and social responsibilities, are not considered so by their elders. They either accept this state of affairs and wait passively until their twenty-first birthdays, or they begin to make all sorts of trouble trying to demonstrate that they are not children, knowing that in doing this they will be praised by other 'children.'

50-50 DATE IDEA GAINS

The 50-50 date idea is gaining impetus on the Rice campus. Perhaps the impetus is being turned in different directions, one on the boy's side and the other on the girl's, but it is there just the same. If things keep on, the idea of having dates at all may vanish, but even if this should happen, co-eds would not be worried, if most of them are to be believed.

However, the eds have something to say about the matter of worrying, and they, too, don't seem to care whether their dates are co-eds or not.

After all, the average date with a college co-ed isn't any more interesting than one with some other girl, and this might be applied to the dates with college boys, too; so we may end with no more campus friendliness between sexes if the boys will only hold out long enough. Of course, if they don't the girls are perfectly willing to continue the present system.

Questions have arisen as to just how this thing is to be worked out. Maybe an itemized account of expenses could be made and a clearing house system used after the evening is over. The use of the car would be considered and 5 cents a mile would be charged. To prevent further details, the owner might furnish the gasoline, or, if it is to be absolutely 50-50, that might be divided, too.

Another doubt has been cleared up as to the one who is to ask for the date. Advocates of the system clearly state that the girl is perfectly free to ask for the date, and this may be carried to the point, by the boys, of waiting for invitations.

Some system has to be inaugurated, and The Thresher staff has formed a group of willing ones. Any of the other students who favor the idea are invited to join them. To do this, just leave an opinion in the contribution box in The Thresher office. A name may be signed or not; or the initials may be put on it or not. The Thresher also invites the comments of the opposition, but is desires to have at least the initials of the opponents.

The following ideas have been received already:

"Best idea yet, probably the only savior for the Rice dances."—P.N.B.

"It isn't the idea of the money with the girls at all. They simply can't get used to it suddenly, and it may be difficult to draw enough girls into it to make it practical."—L. R.

"I'm neutral Leave me out." P. M.

"I understand the girls in other colleges have told the boys to go to——, and I am of the same opinion."—M.A.

"I would have to be fairly well under to ask a girl for a date under this plan."—L. G.

"My girl furnishes the car and we have passes to the shows anyway, so the plan won't affect me much."—L. X. T.

"My girl has so many admirers that if I insisted on the plan, I'd be in a hell of a fix."— J. A. K.

"I'm on the line already."—H. M. B.

"I can't think of anything cute to say just now."—M. S.

"I disapprove of it because I'm broke."—H. B.

Seattle, Wash. — If some of your friends address you as a "ham" hereafter, come back at them with this—

Ham has a lot of potentialities.

University chemists yesterday announced that ham and nitro-glycerine are close relatives — both are composed basically of the same substance, but students eating sandwiches filled with the pickled hind quarters of the barnyard animal are in little danger of explosions among their molars.

Ham contains a large protein element which is principally nitrogen. Nitorgen is also a principal component of dynamite.

"The basic nitrogen in ham is firmly fixed, a stable compound, while in T. N. T. or high explosive shells it is unstable," a University chemistry instructor explained yesterday.
